Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Program: A Community Partnership for Mental Health Crisis Response

What is CIT?

The Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) program is a comprehensive community partnership that transforms how communities respond to mental health and substance use disorder crises. Rather than simply being a police training program, CIT represents a collaborative approach that brings together law enforcement, mental health professionals, individuals with lived experience of mental illness and substance use disorder, their families, and community stakeholders to create more effective, compassionate crisis response systems.

The CIT model, known as the “Memphis Model,” was pioneered in 1988 following a tragic incident in Memphis, Tennessee. What began as a local innovation has since spread throughout the United States and internationally, demonstrating its effectiveness across diverse communities and cultures.

CIT creates a structured forum for ongoing problem-solving regarding interactions between criminal justice and mental health systems. By adhering to best practice standards defined by CIT International through research and experience, communities can build programs that endure and evolve to meet changing needs.

The strength of CIT lies not in any single component, but in its comprehensive approach to system reform. Communities that embrace the full CIT model—including training, system improvements, advocacy, and partnership development—create lasting foundations for supporting their most vulnerable residents while building more effective, humane crisis response capabilities that benefit the entire community.

Welcome to Partnership Opportunities

2026 Canadian Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Summit

Dear Esteemed Partner,

We're delighted to invite you to sponsor the 2026 Canadian CIT Summit, taking place October 19-20, 2026, in Hamilton, Ontario. This year's theme, "Forging Partnerships: Building the Future of Crisis Care in the Steel City," captures our vision of creating stronger, more collaborative approaches to crisis intervention across Canada.

Why Hamilton? Why This Theme?

Hamilton, known as the Steel City, represents strength, resilience, and transformation. As Hamilton has forged its identity through industry and innovation, we are forging new partnerships that will shape the future of crisis care across our nation. In Hamilton's spirit of collaboration, we're bringing together diverse voices to build a unified, compassionate approach to crisis intervention that serves all Canadians.

The Canadian Advantage

The Canadian CIT Summit provides a unique opportunity to engage with the distinctly Canadian landscape of crisis intervention, that includes:

- Incorporating Indigenous-informed practices and cultural safety approaches
- Serving Rural and remote communities that require unique crisis intervention strategies
- Overcoming Provincial healthcare integration and policy innovation
- Promoting Community-based mental health and harm reduction models

Building Tomorrow's Crisis Care Network

As our sponsor, you'll be connecting with Canada's leading crisis intervention professionals, including:

- Crisis intervention teams from coast to coast to coast
- National, provincial, and municipal law enforcement officers
- Mobile Crisis Response Teams
- Mental health professionals and peer support specialists
- Indigenous community leaders and cultural advisors
- Healthcare administrators and policy makers
- Academic researchers and innovative practitioners

Your Partnership, Our Shared Vision

Your sponsorship represents more than financial support—it's an investment in Canadian communities and a commitment to ensuring that every person experiencing crisis receives compassionate, culturally appropriate, and effective care. In return for your investment in helping crisis responders, your organization will gain visibility among decision-makers who are actively shaping crisis intervention policies and practices across Canada.

Ready to help build the future of Canadian crisis care? Please explore the sponsorship and exhibitor opportunities detailed in this prospectus and contact us to discuss how we can create a partnership that aligns with your organization's goals and values.

Sincerely,
Roy Eckerdt
*President,
CIT International*

CIT International

CIT International is the organizational body that supports and promotes the Crisis Intervention Team model globally. Founded to standardize and expand CIT programs, the organization serves as a resource hub for communities wanting to implement or improve their crisis response systems.

CIT International's activities include:

- Training and certification: Providing standardized CIT training curricula and instructor certification programs
- Technical assistance: Offering guidance to communities developing new CIT programs
- Research and evaluation: Supporting studies on CIT effectiveness and best practices
- Networking: Facilitating connections between CIT programs worldwide through conferences and communication platforms
- Resource development: Creating training materials, toolkits, and educational resources
- Advocacy: Promoting the CIT model as an evidence-based approach to crisis response

The organization works to ensure that CIT programs maintain fidelity to the original Memphis model while adapting to local community needs and contexts.
