New Beginning

Eight is a symbol of infinity and a constant flow of energy and power

Eight

нескінченність

- New Beginning
- Eight is a symbol of infinity and a constant flow of energy and power

The Exhibition:

- This exhibition explores the creativity of 16 artists (8 in Ukraine, 8 abroad) who experience a constant flow of energy and rebirth.
- Three of them were Masters who were very successful in both Ukraine and other countries.
- Several Ukrainian artists now live and work in other countries.
- Finally, there are artists who live in Ukraine and are a part of the rebirth of their country.
- Their artworks are displayed virtually.
- To make this experience more complete, an acclaimed singer, Nicholas Holodek's son, Daniel, will sing in one of the virtual rooms.

Mykola Hlushchenko

---

- Mykola Hlushchenko (Ukrainian: Микола Петрович Глущенко, Russian: Николай Петрович Глущенко; 17 September 1901 – 31 October 1977) was a Ukrainian artist. He was a winner of the Shevchenko National Prize in 1972.

Mykola Hlushchenko Artworks

NICHOLAS HOLODEK

- He was born in Hryshyne (now known as Pokrovsk) Donetsk oblast, Ukraine on July 27th, 1924.
- He demonstrated a natural ability to sculpt and draw at a very early age -- his uncle, a portraitist, was his first teacher.
- Nicholas had to emigrate first to Argentina and then to the United States.
- Between 1970 and 1990, Nicholas decorated over 30 churches around the world, assisted primarily by his wife, Selva. He also continued work on his modern sculpture and large-scale murals, which were his personal passion.
- Nicholas' work is self-categorized as "Modern Mysticism" -- his sculpture portrays the abstract in terms of modern science.

LYUDMILA MESHKOVA

---

- In 1980, she won an international competition to create an artwork for the main hall of the UNESCO House in Paris. "For two years I immersed myself in the work, I changed sections, added parts, I put my whole self into it... I was sure it was something important, and it would prove to be so... Only later did viewers begin to 'decipher' the picture, see earthlings, or the galaxy, or the exuberant flowering of plants, or my native Ukraine in the panels. I did not deny either. I wanted to convey all my feelings as an artist, as a woman concerned about the future of our planet. The idea behind the canvas was such: Earth sends the fluids of life and blossoming to the worlds of the Universe..."

Всі, хто Ви чуєте,
я галаксію по шты свого серця.
Я ніколи не забувала себе
в інтерпретації...

Землі всі, хто я галаксію
магічного Омрія в Ваших серцях і
дмух - що таморі маєте.

Evgeniy Tkachenko (1923–2002)

---

Ukrainian painter. Author of portraits, landscapes, genre scenes and easel compositions. Fought in WWII and was wounded in 1944. Studied at the Odesa Art College named after Grekov (1949-1954) where he was introduced to the world of impressionism. This southern city gave the artist a sense and understanding of the extraordinary importance of the air around us, its transparency, and taught him to pay attention to details, which gave his paintings their vividness and accuracy. Lived and worked in Odesa, Kyiv and Cherkasy - his hometown. His paintings are in private collections in Ukraine, Moldova, Poland, Spain and Great Britain.

Oksana Tepp

She is a full-time artist. Her favorite mediums are acrylics, watercolors and mixed-media. Her art is inspired by nature: landscape, seascape, wildlife and flowers, which are often the subjects for her paintings. She also likes painting human figures and portraits, architectural elements and cityscapes. Her styles are realistic and semi-abstract. She enjoys experimenting with new materials and techniques. Lately, she has been using more mixed-media techniques.

Pavlo Vasilchenko

- The subject compositions of Pavlo's paintings serve for the spectator's independent interpretation. Only then, canvases acquire their true meaning. Each of the spectators can find in the pictures something personal, coinciding with the mood, experiences and dreams. Pavlo illustrates the principle of the dismemberment of consciousness into elements and constructing from them complex visual objects offering the viewer the idea of the integrity of the image with the incompatibility of individual elements.

Anatoliy Menkiv

- Paintings from the series "Faces." The works were created under the influence of the revolution and subsequent military events in Ukraine. The artworks tell that a person is changing under the influence of what he/she has experienced in their life. He/she is transforming. One person disappears and a new person appears. Perhaps he/she is awakening from sleep. Perhaps he's/she's getting stronger or, on the contrary, more vulnerable. Perhaps he/she combines both of these qualities. But he/she will no longer be the person he/she was before.

Fedor Zakharov

- Crimean landscapes are the main meaning of Zakharov's work. Mountains, at the foot of which are gardens and vineyards, the architecture of old Bakhchisarai and new cities, the Yalta port with its busy life, protected corners and, of course, the sea, which Zakharov wrote in a variety of motives.
- In his work, he focused on images of landscapes and still lifes. He was a representative of Soviet impressionism. Fedor Zakharov is rightfully considered one of the founders of the Crimean "impressionistic school of painting," having educated, together with Valentin Bernadsky and Nikolai Bortnikov, a whole generation of Crimean artists. He created his works in Crimea and in the village of Sedniv, near Chernihiv, where Taras Shevchenko stayed in 1840.
- Some of his works are in the State Tretyakov Gallery (Moscow), National Art Museum of Ukraine (Kyiv), Simferopol Art Museum, Alupka Palace Museum, Feodosia Art Gallery named after I.K. Aivazovsky, Sevastopol Art Museum, Novokuznetsk Art Museum of Soviet Fine Arts.
