Investigating and Intervening Intra- and Interpersonal Regulation of Daily Affective Experience

Ambulatory assessment offers new ways of investigating the unfolding and regulation of emotional experiences in daily life. This allows not only new insights in relevant contextual factors of the regulation of daily emotions but also opens up opportunities for intervening these processes with ecological momentary interventions. In this symposium innovative contributions investigating intra- and interpersonal regulation of daily emotions will be presented and discussed.

6. Poster Hall

This tab will redirect you to the posters. For each poster a PDF and in some cases a video is available. PDFs and videos can be viewed throughout the conference and for up to one month on-demand following the meeting. During the designated live poster sessions, the poster authors are available for a chat (Q&A).
