Maurice Benard

In August 2018, Benard celebrated 25 years on the award-winning series General Hospital, cementing his status as an enduring television icon. The popular character Michael "Sonny" Corinthos, Jr. originated with Benard in 1993, initially written as only a six-month guest arc. However, Benard became wildly popular with fans around the world and the celebrated actor quickly took Sonny from a peripheral to central role in the fictional city of Port Charles. His portrayal has garnered eight Emmy Award nominations, in addition to taking the statue home in 2003 and 2019.

Away from the spotlight, Benard has always mentored individuals in mental health crisis. However, a letter from a young man whose brother died by suicide moved Benard to begin a public commitment to mental health awareness. On The Oprah Winfrey Show In 2009, he shared his own bipolar diagnosis at the age of 22 and the ensuing struggle to manage his illness, from surviving a stint in a mental health facility as a young man to becoming a television star. Benard's journey with mental illness has also been profiled in magazines including PEOPLE, LA LIFE, and BP.

Benard's General Hospital character has long been on the forefront of socially relevant issues woven into storylines like AIDS and Alzheimer's awareness. He also pushed for his character to be diagnosed as bipolar so men's health awareness could be forefront on a daily television platform.

They All Laughed, an "Open Mic" Comedy Event

Hosted by DBSA Portland Eastside

Finish your Leadership Summit week with big laughs on "National Smile Day." DBSA is calling all Leadership Summit peer participants who are stand-up comics! Would you like to perform a short comedy set on a virtual national stage to peers from all over the United States and meet and network with other DBSA comics? Are you seriously funny?

If you'd like to be considered to perform, please submit a current 3-minute video of your comedy routine by July 15, 2021 to dbsaportlandeastside@gmail.com with your name, chapter or support group, and phone number.

Some important guidelines for your routine:

- Provides a hopeful message
- Mostly about mental health
- No triggering topics such as suicide, trauma, violence, abuse and no blue comedy (profanity or sex)

We are looking forward to seeing DBSA's comic talent and celebrating the end of the conference!

Everything We Learned from COVID (Panel Discussion)

Moderator: Bridget Maul, DBSA Greater Chicago, Panelists: Brian Chase, DBSA Portland Eastside, Bonnie Rosenthal, DBSA Hope & Cope Support Group

COVID-19 affected DBSA local organizations deeply. Within a short amount of time, a majority of DBSA local organizations converted in-person meetings to virtual meetings. It was certainly a great lesson in how nimble and creative we can be. What other unexpected learnings did DBSA local organizations discover in this time of DBSA history? Join a panel of Chapter and Support Group leaders to talk about how this unexpected turn created learnings beyond expectation.

At the end of this session, the participant will be able to:

- describe how DBSA local organizations converted support groups from in-person to virtual meetings within one week of shutdown at the local level;
- articulate at least three learnings from DBSA Chapters and support groups;
- explain how DBSA local organizations plan to move forward as a result of these learnings.

What To Say When Asked About DBSA: Developing Your Story

Featured Speakers: Kevin Williams, DBSA Communications Vice President; Dontae Freeman, DBSA Digital Communications Manager

As an active stakeholder and advocate for DBSA, consider yourself a de facto 365/24/7 spokesperson for the organization. You never know how the person(s) you're speaking with might be an ally to our cause. As such, when asked about DBSA, you should be prepared to speak powerfully and persuasively to all types of audiences about our mission, our goals, and the impact we make for our community.

At the end of the session, the participant will be able to:

- develop and deliver an effective “elevator pitch” for DBSA;
 - understand the importance of knowing the audience;
 - discuss DBSA’s mission within a “problem/solutions/provider” context;
 - understand why it’s important to “put a human face” to DBSA’s work.

Featured Speaker: Christian Tiongson, DBSA Boston

Quiet crafting and creativity can be fulfilling ways of building mindful activity into our lives. Whether you play music, paint, stitch, sew, make, bake, or decorate, creativity can tick all three wellness boxes of achievement, connection and enjoyment. Imagine the advantages to using these outlets to enhance participant wellness. Join Christian Tiongson as he shares DBSA Boston’s approach to meshing mindful creativity with wellness.

At the end of this session, the participant will be able to:

- explain the rationale behind incorporating creative activities;
 - articulate at least three creative activities that can be used to enhance participant wellness;
 - make a plan to incorporate at least two creative outlets in regular support group and Chapter activities.

Featured speaker: Altha Stewart, Senior Associate Dean for Community Health Engagement in the College of Medicine at the University of Tennessee Health Science Center, and member of the DBSA Board of Directors. Moderator, Chrissy Gargano

Due to decades of systemic racism, research has shown that Black individuals in the U.S. are less likely to have access to mental health services, less likely to seek out treatment, and more likely to receive poor quality health care. This session will explore barriers to mental health care in Black communities and opportunities to address them.

At the end of this session, the participant will be able to:

- describe the term “mental health equity” and how it is used;
- define how communities rise to address the disparities.

Demystifying Fundraising

Featured Speakers: Kimberly King DBSA Industry Relations and Partnerships Manager and Chrissy Gargano, Foundation and Corporate Relations Manager. Moderator: Erica Kadel, Manager, Donor Relations

Having the resources you need to accomplish your goals means you're going to need to ask! And, oftentimes, that means asking for money, which can be scary. Understanding the process and using best practices make it less intimidating. Whether you're seeking sponsorship for an event or a grant to support a program, we can provide a roadmap to make your efforts more successful. DBSA National's development managers will share best practices they've learned throughout the years.

At the end of the session, the participant will be able to:

- describe three pieces of information that you should have prepared before your first "ask";
- name two ways to ask for corporate sponsorships;
- access at least one new avenue to research grants and foundations;
- name two helpful hints for submitting proposals.

As an active stakeholder and advocate for DBSA, consider yourself a de facto 365/24/7 spokesperson for the organization. You never know how the person(s) you're speaking with might be an ally to our cause. As such, when asked about DBSA, you should be prepared to speak powerfully and persuasively to all types of audiences about our mission, our goals, and the impact we make for our community.

At the end of the session, the participant will be able to:

- develop and deliver an effective "elevator pitch" for DBSA;
- understand the importance of knowing the audience;
- discuss DBSA's mission within a "problem/solution/provider" context;
- understand why it's important to "put a human face" to DBSA's work.

Call-to-Action: The Role of Peers in Mental Health Research

Featured Speaker: Luke Kramer, Executive Director of The STARR Coalition; Moderator: Kimberly King

Untreated mental illness wreaks havoc on millions of lives – With one in four Americans affected at some point each year, the issue will touch us all. Based on data from 2010, the global direct and indirect economic costs of mental disorders were estimated at US $2.5 trillion. Despite this, the disparity between mental health research and other disease research is vast. NIH spends around $239 billion on research, but only about 7% of the funds go towards mental health (source: ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC5007565).

DBSA National is part of a workgroup composed of mental health stakeholders, including clinician investigators, pharmaceutical and CRO R&D executives, and advocacy leaders, that have developed the call to action to actively support mental health clinical research with concrete actions people can take immediately.

Learn more about how peers can support mental research efforts and its impact on mental wellness.

At the end of this session, the participant will be able to:

- explain why peer engagement is important to mental health research;
 - name obstacles and challenges that peers face when involved with mental health research;
 - list at least two actions peers can take to support mental health research efforts.

Emotional literacy is made up of the ability to identify and understand our emotions. Increasing emotional literacy at an early age is important for children to be able to process, understand, and work through their emotions. Learn more about how the DBSA Mood Crew™ resources can help children and families increase their emotional literacy and set the stage for good life-long mental health.

At the end of this session the participant will be able to:

- describe how early emotional literacy increases lifelong wellness outcomes;
- learn how parents and caregivers, clinicians, and educators can use the DBSA Mood Crew™ as a tool to increase emotional literacy;
- articulate the importance of emotional literacy from the peer perspective.

DBSA's new series I'm Living Proof: A Letter to My Younger Self shares the experiences of young adults that live with depression or bipolar through a letter written and read to their younger self. The blog and podcast feature stories of hope and inspiration. When we reflect on all the challenges we have overcome, we can often find that we are living proof of the strength we carry. Join us for a panel discussion with contributors to hear what the experience of writing to their younger selves was like.

At the end of this session the participant will be able to:

- learn how the process of reflection can be inspiring;
- articulate how reflection can help us understand our own resilience;
- describe how sharing your story can normalize the experience of having mental health symptoms.

Transition Ages: Challenges Facing Young Adults Living with Depression and Bipolar

Featured Speakers: Members of the DBSA Young Adult Council

Transitioning to independence in an ever-changing world can be difficult for young adults, particularly those living with a mood disorder. Living on your own, moving to a new environment, and managing your wellness can be a lot to take on. The DBSA Young Adult Council will discuss their own experiences with these transitions, from what they wish they had known to what they were glad they learned.

At the end of this session the participant will be able to:

- learn from young adults peers about how they navigated challenging transitions;
 - learn more about the DBSA Young Adult Council and how they offer resources to young adults who live with a mood disorder;
 - explain how DBSA Young Adult Council members are committed to sharing their own experiences as a way to advocate for themselves and others.

Facilitator Training

Featured Trainers: Jean Duncan, DBSA Portland Eastside and Rhonda Grener, DBSA Colorado Springs

Last year, Chapter Relations began a tradition of bringing the 8-hour Support Group Facilitator Training to the DBSA Leadership Summit. If you or anyone you know is a peer or family/friend of a peer and would like to go through DBSA National’s official Facilitator Training as part of their Leadership Summit Experience, they must attend all Facilitator Training Sessions in order to receive a certificate of participation.

Registration will be limited.

At the end of this 8-hour training session, the participant will be able to:

- name and explain all eight of the DBSA Support Group Guidelines;
- describe the structure of a DBSA Support Group Meeting;
- execute at least two different techniques for opening a DBSA Support Group meeting;
- utilize at least three techniques of meeting flow management;
- name at least three potential meeting challenges and how to approach or handle each of them;
- apply lessons learned in role plays to real-life support group facilitation.

Let's say that you've been a DBSA support group facilitator for 2 to 3 years. You are a seasoned facilitator but every once in a while even YOU get stumped by something that happened in group. Where do you go for answers? To the DBSA Leadership Summit, of course!

Join Master Facilitator & Trainer Chuck Weinstein of Facilitator Solutions as he facilitates three different discussions based on the situations that are brought to each session and the wisdom in the room. If you are an experienced facilitator and want to continue your learning about facilitation tips, techniques and nuances, one (or more if space is available) of these sessions are for you!

Note: Due to the nature of conversation, the session will be limited to the first 20 people who join the session.

At the end of each of these sessions, the participant will be able to:

- learn at least one new technique of handling a “sticky situation;”
- name two different challenges and how each can be handled in an effective, compassionate manner, focusing on strengths not deficits;
- connect with fellow experienced facilitators from throughout the country.
