VIRTUAL CONFERENCE

CONFERENCE PROGRAM

OVERALL CONFERENCE LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the end of this conference, I will be able to:

- Integrate into my practice knowledge and skills gained from the sharing of Canadian and international research and clinical studies
- Discuss recent advances in the diagnosis and treatment of diabetes, endocrine and metabolic conditions and diseases
- Compare and contrast core concepts, new advances and clinical experiences

ACCREDITATION STATEMENT:

The 2021 Diabetes Canada/CSEM Professional Conference is an accredited group learning activity under Section 1 as defined by the Maintenance of Certification (MOC) program of the Royal College of Physicians & Surgeons of Canada (RCPSC). It is approved by CSEM for a maximum of 19 credits. This program was co-developed and planned with CSEM and Diabetes Canada to achieve scientific integrity, objectivity and balance. Through an agreement between the RCPSC and the American Medical Association (AMA), physicians may convert RCPSC MOC credits to AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. More information on the process to convert RCPSC MOC credits to AMA credits can be found at <https://edhub.ama-assn.org/pages/applications>.

Live educational activities occurring in Canada, recognized by the RCPSC as accredited group learning activities (Section 1), are deemed by the European Union of Medical Specialists (UEMS) to be eligible for ECMEC®.

College of Family Physicians of Canada (CFPC) affiliate members (members whose specialty is not family medicine) may count RCPSC credits toward their Mainpro+ credit requirements. All other CFPC members and non-member Mainpro+ participants may claim up to 50 certified credits per cycle for participation in RCPSC MOC Section 1 accredited activities.

Building/concept description:

Designed as a space where new research and state-of-the-art technologies and treatments are to be presented, this virtual 600 ft by 400 ft conference centre hosts the 2021 Diabetes Canada/CSEM Professional Conference.

The centre's structure is comprised of 100 large mass timber columns and trusses, symbolizing the 100th anniversary of the discovery of insulin—the only effective treatment today for type 1 diabetes—and now symbolically serving as the support and foundation on which the conference centre and research are built today.

The integration of natural materials such as wood and natural daylight into the project were an essential part of the design process, ensuring the health and well-being of both the environment and its users. Showcasing the design and sustainable approach to large-scale wood buildings, the centre acts as a development forward into the new and forthcoming technologies/treatments of the future by offering a welcoming environment for all.

Catherine Daigle:
Catherine Daigle is a first-year Master's of Architecture student at the McEwen School of Architecture and has generously volunteered her time in the designing of the 2021 Diabetes Canada/CSEM Professional Conference lobby space. Below is a link to some of her other works: <https://www.catherine-daigle.com/>
